

Step by Step transfer EA to EA

Wednesday, May 29, 2024 12:55 PM

- EA EA
- Transferring between EA enrollments requires a billing support ticket.
 - Reservations and savings plans automatically get transferred during EA to EA transfers, except in transfers with a currency change.
 - Transfer within the same enrollment is the same action as changing the account owner. For details, see Change Azure subscription or account ownership.

A billing profile lets you manage your invoice and payment methods. A monthly invoice is generated for each billing profile and contains all respective charges from the previous month. Each billing profile has its own payment methods that are used to pay its invoice. The charges shown below are estimated amounts based on your Azure usage and other purchases and do not include tax. Transfer billing ownership

Move subscription tenant

Before you proceed, note

- Azure Reservations don't transfer automatically with the subscription. If you want to transfer a reservation, contact Azure support before transferring your subscription.
- If you have opted to "Move subscription tenant" above, note that this will not transfer some resources, for example, all Azure role-based access control assignments are deleted (See affected users) and system/user designed managed identities are invalidated and not transferred to target directory. Only the recipient will have permissions to manage Azure resources in the subscription. If you have not opted in, then only the billing ownership is transferred to the recipient while preserving existing RBAC assignments and managed identities. Learn more
- Your email address and subscription usage history will be visible to the recipient after transfer completes.
